COVID-19 TESTING SITES

If you need to get tested for COVID-19 you and your primary care provider (if they do not offer testing) can choose from several different options. These include local hospitals, urgent care centers, private healthcare providers, and retail pharmacies. Most have a screening process that you must complete before testing. Cost varies, so be sure to ask. Length of time processing results can also vary.

FREQUENTLY ASKED TESTING QUESTIONS

Q. If I get a COVID-19 test and the results are negative, can I end my quarantine early?

A. No. A COVID-19 test only provides information about the presence of disease at the time the test was taken. Another test just days later may indicate a positive result.

 ****

Q. How long does it take to get my test results?

A. Generally, allow 24-48 hours before results are reported back to you. At some locations, results are taking longer due to an increase in demand for testing.

Q. What can I do while I wait for my test results?

A. It is very important that you stay home until you are notified of your test results. If you live with others, you should practice social distancing, wash hands and sanitize household surfaces often.

Q. My test came back positive. What do I do now?

A. If you test positive for COVID-19, a notification will be sent to the health department. A representative from the health department will then contact you to begin a case investigation. This involves a discussion of your symptoms and who you have been in contact with from either two days before your symptoms began or two days before your test date. You will need to stay home for ten to fourteen days, based on your discussion with the health department. Your commitment to staying home during this period is crucial to shortening the duration and impact of this pandemic.

NOTE: All information provided on this document is subject to change. New information, changing disease scenarios, availability of testing materials, and demand for tests could all impact COVID-19 testing.
